Become part of the Ark in the Park restoration project and Help a Hectare.

Today the Waitakere Ranges are renowned as public parkland. But they are a shadow of their former glory. Over the past 100 years there have been many native plant and animal losses. Kiwi, bellbird and short tailed bat are gone. However the tide is turning, Ark in the Park has reintroduced kokako, whitehead and North Island robin. With your support we can do even more.

Ark in the Park has been operating since 2002. Spearheaded by the Waitakere branch of Forest and Bird in partnership with Auckland Council, the Ark in the Park is an open sanctuary, protecting and restoring the natural splendour.

Over 2000 hectares are now protected through intensive predator control, this is carried out by volunteers and creates a safe haven for our native species.
